Dyan Marie 2010

Dyan Marie creates projects and initiatives that explore urban issues and contemporary cultural experience, she has originated public space and walking projects as interventions, public art, green space and events and has initiated a number of cultural and community organizations. She is the founder of Cold City Gallery, ARTATWORK, DIG IN and Bloor Magazine and co-founded C Magazine, Urban Surface, BIG and a number of community and art festivals. She is the director of her project space, Dupont/Dyan Marie Projects and is a board member of the City of Toronto's, Art for Public Places Committee, Centennial College Academic Advisory Committee and the BloorDale BIA. She was presented with the Urban Leadership: City Soul award from the Canadian Urban Institute, the Government of Canada's, Community Builders Award, the Ontario Provincial Government Good Citizen Award and City of Toronto Clean and Beautiful Award. She is a graduate of the Ontario College of Art and Design and the University Of Waterloo, Masters of Fine Arts. Dyan Marie's recent exhibitions establish the body as a site that filters information and in the process gives it visible shape. She has been an exhibiting visual artist since 1981 and is represented Wynick/Tuck Gallery in Toronto and Michael Gibson Gallery In London. www.dyanmarie.com

Oil paintings of a middle distance that incorporates a series of working website addresses that open up local urban issues and opportunities. Additionally, the sites addresses were installed outdoors throughout the Bloor/Dupont West area – each website was an active project.

1. www.iamalive.ca - A reminder that you are alive. (move your mouse over the surface of the screen to find the message)
2. www.digin.ca - An urban participatory art project that initiates inclusive community and cultural plans and actions that contribute to neighbourhoods by fostering walking projects and community building efforts.
3. www.walkhere.org - A community and public artwork that worked to reconnect the Dupont West neighbourhood by creating an art-embedded walking system throughout community that pulls it together as a place and reconnects the area to the city at large.
4. www.onthecorner.biz - Imagine that you are a prostitute.
5. www.talkhere.org - A collection of overheard conversations that introduces a level of suspense and reflects localized thoughts of opportunity, frustration, concern or irritation
6. lookoutlookhere.dyanmarie.com - A community-inclusive photographic project developed in response to the murder of local ten-year-old girl Holly Jones.

April 2001 "Black Flowers", Wynick/Tuck Gallery, Toronto

1999 "Subjected to Change: Armatures for Standing Up" Wynick/Tuck Gallery Toronto, travel to Kelowna Art Gallery, Kelowna BC, fall 99

"Subjected to Change / Armatures For Standing Up" Teenage hockey players, established businesswomen, retired construction workers - Dyan Marie's digital/photobased works on canvas build homes for them from the materials they touch.

1997 "Murmurs and Messages", Wynick/Tuck Gallery, Toronto

Murmurs and Messages, series of 25, photo based, digitally developed images of flowers, vines and plants seeded with a collection of single word poems.

1996 "Learning to Count", Wynick/Tuck Gallery, Toronto

Learning to Count is a series of works that offers ten phases/ideas intended to represent the way issues surface in the mind. The work constructs a framework to situate continuous shifting concerns in a context of considering new ideas, remembering past concerns and re-remembering past concerns. Concerns and ideas that may be explored and repeated as individuals, as sequential generations and as endless history. These ten works proposed a counting/accounting system developed as a circular progression from one to ten.

Spacing Magazine, Fall 2006,

"Dyan Marie has a simple plan for changing neighbourhoods. It starts by walking..."

Toronto Life, May 2004, Neighbourhoods

"Dyan Marie's passion for the community is contagious. She calls the proposed community walking system "Walk Here", an "art-embedded" walking system, a sort of plein-air gallery with individual works created by local tradespeople and artists. "Our idea is that people can use the park and path as a community centre. It will be a source of pride and indigenous expression."

Canadian Art Magazine, Winter 2004

Writes... "A catalyst for social awareness in this urban intervention by artist Dyan Marie who brings the idea of community to the art world."

This Magazine, Nov./Dec.... Issue 2004

Writes "... Dyan Marie's work lies at the junction of art and activism, in recent years, she's acquired a reputation as one of the city's fiercest community advocates."

Globe and Mail, Jan 24, 2004

Writes "...energetic Toronto-based sculptor, photographer, urban activist and now painter Dyan Marie work relates, in varying ways, to the artist's remarkably fierce and tireless dedication to urban reinvigoration."

Eye, Jan 8, 2004

Writes ... "Marie consolidates her exploration of the ramifications of development in her work, "Brilliantly and Everything Else"

The Nation Post, Jan 8, 2004

Writes"... Dyan Marie makes the term "Multi-disciplinary artist" seem too easy. One gets the sense that her work is like a watering hole, providing a moment of pause for the tireless and wholly dedicated community master planner. She's like a modest Jane Jacobs, armed with art supplies"
